Enclosures (2)

The Honorable Allen W. Dulles
Director
Central Intelligence Agency
2430 E Street, N. W.
Washington 25, D. C.

ENCLOSURE 1

1. This request is for summary estimates of the character, scope, and magnitude of the internal threats posed by communist operations in the less developed countries. The countries to be covered include both independent and dependent countries; in Africa, all except South Africa; in Asia, all except the communist states, Japan, Australia, and New Zealand; in Latin America, all. The form and content of the data should be as follows:

a. A chart or tabulation showing the magnitude of the indigenous communist movements in the various countries. For each country the information should include: (1) whether the communist organization is legal or illegal; (2) the number of its members; (3) the number of its supporters; and (4) the number of its sympathizers. An activist might be considered a member; a voter might be considered a supporter; a fellow-traveller might be considered a sympathizer. But CIA is welcome to furnish its own definitions for these general categories of communist affiliation.

b. A chart or tabulation for countries in which there are legal communist parties, to show: (1) year of last national elections; (2) communist votes in last national elections, % of total; (3) rank order among other parties in % of votes; (4) per cent increase or decrease over previous national elections; (5) current seats in the national legislature, number (per cent); and (6) other significant offices held, national and local. For this purpose, CIA should include countries in which the communist party, while identifiably communist, employs other labels.

c. A chart or tabulation to show the extent of communist infiltration of key organizations or elements in the various countries. The criterion of extent of infiltration should be "influence" or "control" in this case. The extent should be described in quantitative terms such as; negligible, some, considerable, predominant. The organizations or groupings to be covered should include: armed forces, police, civil service, education, communications (press, radio, movies, literature, etc.), trade unions, ethnic minorities, tenant farmers, etc. CIA should add other significant groups where appropriate, e.g., leftist or radical-nationalist organizations or parties, veterans organizations, guerrillas, and the like.

d. For each country, a brief estimate elaborating the chart data. These should treat the indigenous communist threat over the next five years or so.

e. For each country, a brief appraisal of their ability to cope with communist revolutionary operations ranging from legal or quasi-legal activities to armed insurrection.

f. For those underdeveloped countries in which the major internal threat to U. S. interests, other than communist: a brief estimate of the nature and gravity of the internal threat, as in e above.

ENCLOSURE 2

1. The Committee would be interested in a briefing of its studies group by selected members of the CIA staff, regarding the political and social ramifications of military aid programs. Basic questions to be covered in this briefing are of the following kind:

a. After the initiation of a military aid program, has there been a political reorientation within officers corps of recipient countries towards the U. S., or the Free World in general?

b. Have military aid programs improved the internal stability of local military forces?

c. Have such programs been accompanied by a decline in communist or otherwise subversive and revolutionary influence?

d. What has been the effect of such programs on attenuating guerrilla unrest or on the prevention of guerrilla activities?

e. Have military officers who receive training in American institutions achieved prominence either within the military organizations or within the state and have they been able to influence local politics in a pro-American sense?

f. What have been the politically negative results of military aid programs?

g. What have been the effects of such programs on the educational level in the recipient countries?

2. The information to be included in the subject briefing should be oriented toward the individual countries with which the U. S. has bilateral military aid agreements: Brazil, Chile, Columbia, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Greece, Guatamala, Hati, Honduras, Indochinese States, Iran, Iraq, Korea, Libya, Nicaragua, Peru, Philippines, Portugal, Spain, Thailand, Turkey, Uruguay.
